DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 6.—By the usual large majority Republicans swept all the Bucks county offices yesterday in the general election. The vote in most of the 100 precincts was very light owing to the absence of contests although in 5 districts where there were contests over school bond issues, large votes were recorded.

Judge Hiram H. Keller, of Doylestown, who was appointed to the bench by Governor Fisher this year was elected on the Republican and Democratic ticket to a full term of ten years. There was no Democratic candidate.

For Judge of Superior Court, Bucks county gave William H. Keller and Thomas J. Baldrige, Republicans, a substantial majority over Henry C. Niles, Democrat.

District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, of Doylestown, Republican, was re-elected by a large majority over Charles B. Ermentrout, of Southampton, Democrat.

John L. High, of Dublin, Republican, was elected to the office of Prothonotary, defeating Charles S. Doyle, Democrat, of Langhorne.

For Director of the Poor, Harvey B. Fitzgerald, of Quakertown, Republican, defeated Stephen Gill, of Richboro, and for Jury Commissioner Stacy B. Brown, of Newtown, Republican, was re-elected, defeating Kenward S. Ahlum, of Doylestown.

Complete totals for 93 of the 101 election districts in Bucks County were announced today at noon at the Republican County Headquarters in Doylestown, as follows:

Judge of Superior Court: William H. Keller, R, 13,970; Thomas J. Baldrige, R, 12,501; Henry C. Niles, D, 4,762.

7. The Weather

At least a rudimentary knowledge of meteorology, the science of the atmosphere, is essential to every flyer. With changes in the weather and with the causes of these changes he must be familiar. If he is to do much "cross-country flying," meteorology is a subject in which he should be thoroughly versed.

Six major atmospheric factors determine the weather: temperature, pressure, wind, humidity, clouds and precipitation. These factors undergo both general and local change, periodically and non-periodically, and all have their different effects upon flying conditions.

For local flights, the airman considers chiefly the wind, which bears so directly on his take-offs, landings and speed; the visibility, which limits the extent of his vision; the clouds, whose altitude may restrict the height at which he may fly (ceiling).

He will learn that high wind often accompanies sudden changes in temperature or barometric pressure; that warm winds passing over cold ground or cold winds blowing over warm earth frequently create fog; that various types of clouds (cirrus, stratus, cumulus, nimbus, etc.) are to be found at somewhat fixed altitudes in different seasons.

(Tomorrow's article of Plane Talk will discuss with weather knowledge in flight).

MANY OF THE APPEALING HOMES ARE SMALL ONES

Gerald L. Kaufman Refers To Coolidge Speech Regarding Subject

M A N Y MODERNIZING

By Robert S. Thornburgh
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Some of the most appealing and fascinating homes in the world are small, representing but little outlay and are the abode of people of moderate means, according to Gerald Lynton Kaufman, of New York, a leading figure in the American Institute of Architects.

Kaufman, referring to a speech made by former President Coolidge at Mountain Lake, Fla., characterized the former president's words as a great stimulus to a movement to bring harmony of design and environment into every residence community. Kaufman called attention to a tendency of greater number of Americans to modernize their homes this year to place them within the national ideal of beautiful residences.

"They may represent but little outlay and be the abode of people of moderate means, but if there dwells fine character within it will shine forth and give to all the surroundings a touch of peace and loveliness which the most spacious palace cannot surpass," Kaufman said.

"While few have the means to present such a gorgeous display as will here strike the eye and the ear, it is well to remember that beauty is not dependent upon large areas or great heights."

The four year war-period of enforced neglect of upkeep and repair created an urgent necessity for alterations and repair of homes, according to Kaufman. Building activity was stirred to intense heat after the war with the result that many home-owners were scalded by the steam of rising prices.

"Since 1921 this ebullition has calmed down to a warm and healthy simmering of labor and material costs, and today home comfort is available to everyone willing to pay a fair price for modernizing," Kaufman said.

"The difference between remodeling and modernizing is more than one of nomenclature. It is the difference between the trial-and-error method and that of modern science. Behind the newer term lie years of research by architects, engineers, builders and industrial laboratories, into the economies of reconstruction."

"Modernizing must mean far more than simply replacing the obsolete with the up-to-date; it must mean far more than an increase in comfort and convenience; and it must transcend the mere substitution of the beautiful for the ugly. The economics of modernizing concerns the resultant value of the finished home and must stand comparison with new construction involving a similar investment."

Francis P. Sullivan, of Washington, also a well known figure in the world of architecture, declared that antique flavor in modern building often means only the substituting of poor, imperfect materials for those which are beautiful and substantial.

"There is danger that the vulgarity of shoddiness will merely be replaced by an equally objectionable vulgarity of slovenliness," Sullivan said, in protesting against the "tyranny of texture."

THROUGHOUT THE STATE

By Leo Dolan

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

In the terse, expressive slang of 1929, the Republican party was "sitting pretty" in the Keystone political saddle today.

Not only were the Republican Superior Court incumbents, Judges William H. Keller and Thomas J. Baldrige, re-elected by crushing pluralities over their lone Democratic opponent, Judge H. C. Niles; added to this was undisputed evidence that "whirlwind, last-minute efforts of party leaders to mobilize to full strength the Republican rank and file in county, city and hamlet had succeeded far beyond the wildest expectations of the Republicans themselves."

Keller and Baldrige's victories, however, had been expected. What had not been expected, even by confident, pre-election prognosticators of the Republican organization, were the surprising triumphs registered in the hinterland by city and county candidates.

As examples of a well-oiled, smoothly-working Republican steam-roller, G. O. P. leaders today merely had to point to Mount Carmel, in Northumberland county; Lancaster and Scranton.

Mount Carmel, for the first time in twenty years, elected a Republican Chief Burgess in the person of Elmer Delcamp; Lancaster, overthrowing a strongly-entrenched coalition organization that has held sway for seven years, turned the mayoralty reins over to T. Warren Metzger, likewise a Republican, and Scranton, registering the largest majority ever given a mayoralty candidate, swept Fred K. Denly, Republican, into the city hall on the crest of a landslide.

Derby rolled up a majority of 11,157 votes over John Durkan, Democrat's standard bearer. Derby's total vote was 25,010 and Durkan's 13,853.

In Lancaster, Metzger defeated William S. Raub, Democratic-Independent coalitionist, by a majority of about 4,000 votes, latest figures giving Metzger 11,201 and Raub 10,243.

Pottsville hung out the "welcome" mat for John B. Dengler, Republican mayoralty candidate, by a 580 majority over Claude A. Lord, erstwhile Republican who ran on the Democratic slate.

Schuylkill county's "contest" for the common pleas court bench proved no contest whatever, Judge Henry Houck rolling up a majority of over 25,000 ballots against the meagre 1200 cast for District Attorney C. A. Snyder by loyalist Democrats who wrote Snyder's name on the ballots.

York County swept Ralph F. Fisher, Republican, into the District Attorney's office with a whoop, Fisher winning out over Amos Herrmann, Democratic incumbent, by more than 5,000 majority. Fisher is the youngest District Attorney ever elected in York, he being but 28 years old.

Dauphin county, a Republican stronghold, ran true to form in returning majorities of approximately five to one, according to incomplete returns, for Republican candidates for county offices. In Harrisburg, the ratio was slightly increased.

Philadelphia's Republican organization had no trouble in turning in a majority of approximately 200,000 for the G. O. P. candidates, a normal defeat which Democratic leaders accepted philosophically.

In Montgomery county and in Norristown, Republican candidates for county and city offices swept to victory by large pluralities. Montgomery county's vote was surprisingly large in view of the "off year" angle.

FALLSINGTON SETTLED EARLY BY THE FRIENDS

History Shows There Was An Overland Route There In 1675

PENN'S HOME SECTION

FALLSINGTON, Nov. 6.—There was an overland route through Fallsington as early as 1675, according to Colonial records. This road was known as the "King's Path" and contributed greatly to the progress of Crewkerne, as Fallsington was then known.

The Friends, by whom the village was settled, held meetings in their respective homes before their meeting house was erected around 1689.

William Penn, who was looking for a site for his home in the then new world, was attracted by beauty of the countryside around here and erected his colonial mansion "Pennsbury" in that part of Falls Township known as Penn's Manor. He next directed his attention towards erecting a place of worship for himself and his followers. It is recorded that he chose Fallsington as a desirable location for this, and it is said that the old leaning oak (Continued on Page Six)

ILLITERATE

The United States is the biggest business country in the world. And the biggest business in this country is education.

Every year this big and most important of businesses spends $2,500,000,000. It employs 800,000 teachers and thousands of other workers. Directly it serves 26,000,000 children, but indirectly it serves and benefits every man, woman and child in the country.

Great as it is this business has not accomplished its full mission. It has not even solved the elementary problem of teaching the people how to read and write.

According to the census, there are six illiterates among every hundred persons in the United States over ten years of age. This is another way of saying the country's illiteracy rate is 6 per cent. Not a very brilliant record for a country whose annual national income is estimated to be somewhere between $60,000,000,000 and $75,000,000,000 and whose national wealth is set at $400,000,000,000.

In literacy this country is behind France, England, Germany, Sweden, Norway, Netherlands, Switzerland and Denmark. And by states the illiteracy here ranges from as low as 1 per cent to as high as 22 per cent.

In fairness to this country it must be said, however, that the percentage of literacy among the white, English-speaking people of the United States is as high, if not higher, than that of the corresponding native class of any other country. The great educational problem in the United States is carrying education to the blacks, Indians, Mexicans and immigrants and the illiterate mountaineers and "prairie rats."

PROSPERITY

Mid-autumn finds the United States favorably situated from the standpoint of employment. What unemployment there is of the sort always with us and in the abolition of which those most directly affected are the least interested. Isolated instances excepted, the presently unemployed care little whether they work or loaf.

September experienced an increase in employment and earnings. Increase of employment in nine classifications more than offset decreases in three. In manufacturing the employment level was 4.5 per cent higher than a year ago and broke all records since March of 1927. Payrolls in manufacture were 7.5 per cent higher. These are comprehensive figures, being based on reports from 34,320 enterprises employing 5,227,555 workers.

Agriculture has had a satisfactory year and furnished employment to hundreds of thousands during the harvest season. The steel industry's prosperity is the surprise of the industry itself. Construction is gaining new impetus after a relatively poor year. The automobile industry is most active. Mining operations in the coal regions have been resumed on a large scale. All in all the prospect is gratifying.

Autumn prosperity is the source of considerable satisfaction, fortifying those groups and sections to which winter inevitably brings a seasonal let-up.

People generally save a few cuss words for a rainy day.

People who won't stop at anything should never drive autos.

SYNOPSIS

Violet, a chorus girl, and her jockey, Wally, enlist the aid of Jerry, understudy to the star, in getting the consent of Wally's uncle to their marriage. Jerry allows Uncle Steve to mistake her for Violet, and assumes the role of a "cheating woman" so that he will be happy to let someone else marry Wally. Blame, Steve's lawyer, suggests that they take Jerry out to get acquainted before making a final decision, and Jerry's friend, Wally, comes along. The gold-digger starts, and is brought to a climax by a party which Steve is going to fail. Jerry tries to shock him by telling him she has deliberately taken Wally away from her best friend.

She became pensive, and drank again, very little, of course, but Uncle Steve did not notice that. Her head fell back against the sofa, and she closed her eyes for several minutes. When she opened them, she pretended to drink again, and looked over at Lee with half-closed eyes, and a dazed, half-drunken expression on her face. He smiled sweetly at her and patted her hand.

"Just don't worry about it. Everything will be all right. Others would not even give the situation a thought."

"It's so hard to make you understand, Uncle Steve. There's a lot more you don't know. You see," she continued, "Wally didn't turn. I grabbed him. I couldn't help it. That's my nature. Anything I want, I take."

"Never mind about Wally now," Lee said consolingly. "Let's talk about you. Tell me all about yourself. Begin at the beginning."

By this time Uncle Steve had become certain of one thing—that the wine was doing him no good. He made a pitiful effort to sit erect and keep his head up straight, but the over-emphasized dignified position he tried to assume made it all the more clear that he was succumbing to the effects of all he had had to drink.

"Toodlooo!" chirped Jerry, raising her glass to Lee's.

"I beg your pardon?"

"When I say 'toodlooo,' you must say 'toodlooo,' Jerry explained.

"Toodlooo!" she repeated.

"Um—er—toodlooo!" Uncle Steve replied, conscious of the fact that it was a little below his dignity. He took a long drink and assumed once more his dignified attitude.

"Yes, as I was saying, I've grown interested in you, and have come to feel that, hidden underneath all your—glitter and frivolity—is just a nice, old-fashioned girl."

"Oh, Uncle Steve, you're so kind," Jerry began to sob softly.

"Why, Jerry, you're crying. What's the matter?"

"You're too good to be sitting here with me. My life—has been—so awful," she admitted, allowing her head to fall on his shoulder as she continued to weep bitter tears.

"There, there, now. Control yourself."

"And I'm so ashamed!"

"Please don't cry. Everything will be all right. You're just upset."

Lee had never before been confronted with such a situation and in his ignorance at handling it, he sought to distract Jerry by raising his glass for another drink.

"Toodlooo, Jerry!" he said foolishly.

"Toodlooo!" she replied, drying her eyes.

"Do you feel better?" he asked solicitously.

"A little."

"Of course, you do." He patted her hand and emitted a dignified cough. "Now, tell Uncle Steve all about it. Remember, confession is good for the soul. But please don't cry."

Jerry sat back in her chair thoughtfully and sighed, and then she began to relate her story.

"Well, it all began when I was born. That's where the trouble always starts. I was born in a little town called—Chillicothe."

"Poor child!" Lee sympathized.

"That's just it—I was poor. If only I'd been born rich, I might have been spared everything. But I was so young." She leaned towards him confidentially and lowered her voice. "Uncle Steve, I was born so young."

"Continue," he urged Jerry, taking her hand in his, and mingling his sighs with hers. "Don't be afraid to tell your Uncle Steve everything."

"I grew up there—in Chillicothe—among the fields and the cows and the pigs. I loved them all—even the relatives."

She lifted her glass, from which she had only taken small sips, and clinked with his.

"Toodlooo!"

"Toodlooo!" Uncle Steve exclaimed with dignity, drinking with her. "Then what?"

"I came to the city. I was eighteen. If I'd only come a year earlier, I would only have been seventeen."

"Think of it—only seventeen!" Lee exclaimed.

"Then—then—Harold floated into my life. Harold Harrison!"

"Floated?"

"Yes, he was—a—a—swimming instructor. I trusted him and he deceived me. Oh, Uncle Steve, it was terrible!" Her voice broke, and she wept again on his shoulder.

"There—there," he soothed her again. "Don't be afraid. It's all over now, and it will help you to confide in me. Come now, brace up."

She sat up bravely.

"Uncle Steve, honestly, he was just—a—a—"

"A cad?"

"Yes, a cad!"

"He told me he was a millionaire, but he couldn't even pay the installments on my engagement ring. So I got a job in the chorus. Oh, Uncle Steve, the chorus! Just think of it!"

"I never knew before men were like that, but I was to learn soon enough all the miseries a poor girl has to contend with."

"Poor Jerry."

"I said the chorus, didn't I?"

"Well, that's where I met Louie. He was a big—wood pulp man from—Oregon."

"Did you marry him?"

"I can't remember. It's all so vague now. But David committed suicide."

"David?"

"Yes, oh, I didn't tell you about David, did I?"

"I'm afraid not."

"Well, I met him after Louie's wife came and took him back."

"Louie's wife?"

"Yes—he was married, you know. Oh, the brute!"

"But about David," Uncle Steve urged. "You said you met him after Louie's wife came and took him back."

"Yes, I met him, and went with him to—Arizona to forget. And poor David! He was always subject to dizzy spells. He lost his balance and fell into the Grand Canyon."

"Dear, dear, dear, how tragic! You must have suffered so, Jerry darling. Poor dear Jerry!"

"I was heart-broken."

"I can well imagine it. Falling into the Grand Canyon! And that was the end of David?"

Jerry could see now that Uncle Steve was not to be shocked. She would carry the farce through to the end, but she had accomplished nothing for Wally and Violet. This had been her last and her biggest hope and it was very obviously doomed to end in failure. She decided to simulate a more advanced state of intoxication. If she was putting on an act, it was just as well to do everything in her power to "put it over." He had probably had too much to drink himself to recognize a slight state of inebriation in anyone else.

"It was right after that I met Ferdie. He made life miserable for me. Just think, Uncle Steve, one night I was asleep on the couch when he came home. He got a lot of newspapers together and started a fire under me."

"A fire?" Lee ejaculated. "Good heavens, why?"

"So after I poisoned Ferdie, I met Horatio. Oh, Uncle Steve," she sobbed, putting her hands over her face. "I can't go on. What chance has a poor, defenceless little girl in this wicked world?"

Lee put his arm around her and drew her to him, but this only seemed to aggravate her hysterical condition.

"Oh, dear, oh dear," she said, "whatever can you think of me now? And it isn't as if it's my fault. You can see it isn't, Uncle Steve, can't you?"

Like Lindbergh, Miss Lyon will fly solo. Carry some one along with her? "I do not wish the responsibility of having another person's life in my hands. "Myself"—she shrugged expressively—"that is different."

"KONJOLA ONLY MEDICINE THAT DID ANY GOOD"

Grateful Lady, Relieved of Stomach and Liver Troubles and Rheumatism, Praises
Master Medicine

MISS MAE ARMS

"I needed a good medicine badly, for I suffered from stomach and liver trouble, also rheumatism," said Miss Mae Arms, R. F. D. No. 3, Myerstown, Penna. "My system was badly run-down. After my meals, gas formed and caused intense pain, together with a smothering feeling. Terrible headaches, which came upon me frequently, caused no end of misery. The rheumatism seemed to go all through my body and I got little sleep at night. Three bottles of Konjola improved my health wonderfully. My stomach is better and no gas forms. My appetite has greatly improved. I do not have headaches. The rheumatic pains have completely disappeared. I eat any kind of food I like and sleep well every night. Konjola was the only medicine that ever did me any good."

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. (Adv.)

"He explained how, by the application of various mordants, and the expert use of a file, a poker, a yard of iron chain and a shotgun, a workman-like job of stone-cutting and joinery had been given the equivalent of four hundred years' wear. A thousand dollars, he boasted, was spent on this room alone—giving it the antique flavor."

Let's Keep Him in Bristol

Every boy and girl in Bristol is a potential asset to us all. Right development of this asset implies better schools, wholesome amusement, promising industrial and professional opportunity---environment that recognizes the developing power of youth---and gives it a real chance.

When you let John or Mary leave the home town---you may have lost a budding Lincoln, Edison, Ford---a "future great"

Do your part in making Bristol a better place to live and thrive. Spend your money at home---where your dollar continues to do a hundred cents worth of work for the boys and girls of our own city---and incidentally to give you far greater return both directly and indirectly than you could otherwise obtain for it.

HOW DO YOU FEEL ON ARISING?

Very likely your kidneys control your answer. Fine, to awake with a lively healthy energetic body. Miserable to drag an aching tired weary body from a restless sleepless bed. S. L. Kramer, Sellersville, Pa., says: "Now when I feel that way, I take Foley Pills diuretic." They regulate the kidney action and restore healthy activity; remove the haunting dread of ill health, brighten the mental outlook. Foley Pills diuretic will satisfy you. BENSALEM TWP. PUPILS ATTEND A CONFERENCE

Quintet Represents School
at Debating League
Sessions

TO ASSIGN PLAY PARTS

BENSALEM TOWNSHIP HIGH SCHOOL, Cornwall Heights, Nov. 6.—Five student delegates represented Bensalem Township High School at the Ursinus-College Debating League Conference at Collegeville on Saturday.

Samuel K. Faust, vice-president of the league, and supervising principal of the township schools, accompanied the group. Mr. Faust was re-elected to the office of vice-president for the ensuing year.

The pupils who attended the session were: Grace Barth, Anna Scott, Alma Mackenzie, William Frantz and Joseph Copestake.

Parts have been assigned students of the school for the one-act play "Maid of France," which will be presented at the next meeting of the Dramatics Club, the last Wednesday of November.

Programs which are arranged by the students of the school are presented each Friday during the assembly period. The numbers given last Friday were:

Song, "Two Little Pumpkins," Mildred Marshall, pantomimed by "Billy" Amick and Elsie Melson; reading, "Customs of Hallowe'en," Anna Scott; song, "Mighty Lak a Rose," June Clifford; recitation, "Little Orphan Annie," Gertrude Roher; harmonica selections, "Stars and Stripes Forever," "Pagan Love Song," extracts from "Light Cavalry," Ryland Mitchener; recitation, "Hallowe'en," Bella Reichle.

At a special meeting of the Student Council held on Tuesday it was agreed to sanction the formation of both a girls' and boys' athletic association. The organization will take place the latter part of this week.

There have been purchased by the school two new alto horns for use in connection with the band. Both of the horns have been assigned to girls, namely, Grace Barth, a senior, and Wanda Budney, a junior.

George Luciana received his first lesson yesterday on the bass horn, and he and Henry Bowman will take charge of the bass music in the band numbers.

Delegates from Hatboro, Newtown, Langhorne, Morrisville, Bristol and Bensalem Township schools met in the high school building here last evening for the purpose of forming a basketball league, involving both girls' and boys' teams.

Guy Miller and Miss Ruth Hansen represented the Bensalem Township schools at the session.

The assembly program next Friday will be in conjunction with Armistice Day celebration. Richard Fechtenburg, past commander of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, and a number of the township board of education, will address the students at that time. Other fitting numbers including readings and musical selections by the students will be on the program.

The Science Club of the school will have its second meeting of the year on Thursday at the noon hour, when the club will be reorganized.

Bids for equipment and furnishing needs of the new school building will be opened at a meeting of the board of education tomorrow evening. The meeting is to take place in the school building.

at the entrance of the driveway still carries the ring that Penn tied his horse to when he attended the meetings, although it has long been imbedded under the bark of the tree.

An old certificate of marriage still exists, John and Mary Sotcher being the contracting parties. Penn was a witness to the marriage, John and Mary being steward and stewardess of his household. A large venison platter with Penn's initials is another relic of this period.

In 1689 a committee was appointed to make plans for erecting a building where Friends might worship. When the ground on which the building stood was purchased a yearly quit rental of one grain of Indian corn was stipulated owing to an error in the deed.

Homes, burial places, houses for worship (two now standing in substantial evidence), the Hicksite, bearing date of 1789, and the Orthodox, 1841, having been established, the call next came for a school. The hip-roof house probably built in 1757, and used at one time for a place of worship, after the first meeting house had been burned, was used as a boarding school for girls. It is now modernized and used as a school for Friends.

The old steam-mill, owned and operated by David Heston, after having done service in this line, was fitted up to serve as the first public school here in 1856.

The heating plant consisted of a large cylindrical stove, with a crack running around its circumference through which the fiery red coals heated to the limit, gave forth a semblance of heat to the far corners of the room. This was probably the cause for its destruction in 1917. This catastrophe removed all cause for argument as to whether the town warranted a new school building and the modern structure that was erected late in 1917 houses the teachers and pupils of Fallsington. But even this structure has proven to be too small, so an annex is being erected.

The sale of the National Hotel on January 29 marked the passing from the pages of local history, of one of Bucks County's oldest hotels. This hostelry dates as far back as 1826 and due to durable materials used in its construction has given indication of lasting for another century. The present owners of the building are the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

A recent development known as Fallsington Heights along the Lincoln Highway has speeded up the growth of this village, which up to recent years has been spasmodic and slow. The present population is estimated at 400, with meeting places for four religious faiths, Methodist Episcopal, All Saints' Protestant Episcopal, Roman Catholic and Friends, who were among the original settlers.

A fine new fire station to house Fire Company No. 1, of Fallsington, is the community's latest asset, and may be rated as one of the finest in this vicinity.

From Classroom to the Clouds Has Been Her Record

Miss Annie Peck, a mountain climber of thirty years ago, who is planning at the age of 72 a flight over the ancient cities and mountains of South America. At the extreme left Miss Peck is shown in her mountain climbing costume of thirty years ago when she scaled many of the loftiest peaks of Europe, Asia and South America. The scene in the center shows Miss Peck's party of by-gone days when she made her record on the Peruvian peaks. At the right we have a close-up of this daring mountain climber as she is today, still young and willing to undertake tasks which others shirk. The erstwhile school teacher will have the pleasure of viewing from the lofty heights the mountains which in earlier days she scaled.
